

39 CORN STREET

BOUTIQUE OFFICE ACCOMMODATION

SIR GILES GILBERT SCOTT

39 Corn Street was built in 1933 by Sir Giles Gilbert Scott, architect and designer of the red telephone box. His characteristic style was a blend of Gothic tradition and modernism lending a sense of grandeur to the functionality of notable buildings like Battersea Power Station and Liverpool Cathedral. Gilbert Scott was knighted by King George V and appointed a Member of the Order of Merit (OM) by King George VI.

ELEGANT & STYLISH

Taking its cues from the Art Deco period in which it was built, the interior of 39 Corn Street feels akin to a private members' club, but with a modern edge. Exposed original brickwork is softened by brushed brass light fittings, pastel hues and parquet flooring. Originally built as a bank, 39 Corn Street clearly reflects Sir Giles Gilbert Scott's architectural influence, featuring window designs that echo the distinctive pane pattern of his iconic red telephone box.

MODERN & FLEXIBLE

This modern, flexible, fully fitted workspace is ready for occupation and combines contemporary comfort with thoughtful amenities, offering air conditioning, a six-person lift and exceptional natural light, complemented by feature lighting, showers, cycle storage and a new communal roof terrace that enhances everyday wellbeing for all users.

CENTRAL & CONNECTED

Corn Street is in the heart of the historic city centre of Bristol, an area which has seen strong regeneration and is filled with restaurants, pubs, secret bars and independent coffee shops. St Nicholas Market is around the corner, home to street food and a farmers' market, while the harbourside is a short stroll away for arts and culture. At the end of the street are metrobus stops and Temple Meads Station is a 12-minute walk.

The area is already very popular with a wide range of existing office occupiers in particular in the media, creative, technology, professional and financial services sectors. Major nearby occupiers include Immediate Media, Graphcore, Immersive Labs/ Access to Music, Lloyds Banking Group and Wards Solicitors.
