Head over to Nova Place, where you'll find Japanese ramen and buns at Bone Daddies, fresh sushi at Sticks 'n' Sushi, and freshly baked bread and pastries at Ole & Steen.

More and more businesses are choosing to call Victoria home. And who can blame them, with its world-renowned dining, big-name shopping and some of the city's best transport links.

The National Rail connections at Victoria Station make for simple, hassle-free commuting, with the Victoria, Circle and District lines also providing excellent underground connections. There's an underground entrance just a matter of metres from 80-100 Victoria Street.

GETTING AROUND

Nestled next to Victoria Station, and a short stroll from St James’s Park, 80–100 Victoria Street is perfectly placed. The Cardinal Place Victoria Underground entrance is paces away, with tube and rail interchanges meaning much of London is mere minutes from your office.
